URL's and variables in preview mode

- Landing Page preview: the URL in the Preview mode is a different one than the URL generated by the system during the attack. Let's assume you created a domain called example.com and one landing page file called index.html. Then the final link sent to the recipient will be "http://example.com/randomized value" (index.html gets replaced by "randomized value" to track the clicks of the user).
- Previewing links in a mail template: links in an email template in preview mode won't work (you will get redirected to an error page). If you want to test the functionality, either use the test mode or place your user in a test recipient group and start the campaign with the test group.
- Variables: variables in preview build get populated with dummy values. For example, the %name% variable will always get replaced with "Jon Doe".
